Young Sir,

This is to inform you that Mr. Terre Rouge has been placed under the photographer's lamp and will be mailed tomorrow to you.¹ I returned last Saturday, more tanned than at Lake Tahoe, after having snorkled among Sting Rays and Lobsters, Yellowtails and Sea Urchins and been bitten by sand flies and other minor monsters. It all did me very well and I have regained my former confidence in my body natural, so that my two bodies (which had lost contact with each other) are again in harmony. News did not reach me, so I have none for you.

Love

EKa. [Signed]

¹ The microfilm I had procured from the Bibliothèque Nationale of the Tractatus of Jean de Terre Rouge (aka Terrevermeille) was printed out in Princeton and mailed to me in Seattle. My edition of that work, left unfinished in the 1950s, was completed 50 years later and can be found elsewhere on this website.
