

THE INSTITUTE FOR ADVANCED STUDY
PRINCETON, NEW JERSEY
July 3, 1963

Professor Ralph E, Giesey
Department of History
University of Minnesota
Minneapolis 14, Minnesota

Dear Minneapolisite:

Thanks for your note. That you should have via Margie [Ševčenko] third hand reports through [Ernest] Kitzinger is very strange. Nevertheless, you have them, and you are correct in assuming that I shall be off for the Islands by July 17.

The office is yours while you are here and I am gone. I have nothing against your enjoying the cool air of my air conditioner. Moreover, you would find it difficult to mess up my office more than it is anyhow. You can use the big table in the air conditioner room and get out of it before I come, about August 21. The keys are in the hands of the successor to Mrs. Hartz, but there is little similarity between Mrs. Susan Nicoll and her predecessor.¹ She will, however, like another St. Peter, give you the keys of the two offices. You will not need your former room, but still the keys should remain together.

[Erich] Kahler may not have acknowledged your letter—but who does?—but he has worked quite decently and has told me that while the Bollingen people are tied up for 1964, they could easily take the book for 1965. So you had better get in touch with Kahler once you are settled in Princeton and in our project "pavillons". I should like to call your attention to the fact that the bachelor apartments—and you would count as a bachelor even though thrice successfully divorced—have the full afternoon sun and may get rather hot in July and August. You will have to discuss that with Mrs. Barnett.²

Nothing else to add.

Love,
EKA [Signed]

¹ Reference to successive secretaries.

² Ruth Barnett, managing director of Institute's staff.