Recounts how French peasants of Béarn in the Pyrenees determined "marriage strategies" on the basis of "cost analysis" rather than by following legal precepts; [note: his repeated disavowal of legal influences is suspect].

"Women and the Family Economy in Eighteenth-Century France," French Historical Studies, IX (Spring, 1975), pp. 1-22.

Thesis that married woman not a homemaker in the modern sense: cleaning, minding, cooking, child-rearing were marginal aspects of her existence. Her main function was as part of the family economy, including pre-marriage employment to amass a dowry, and post-marriage contribution of 1/2 or 1/3 of money in the ménage.

Review: NY Rev. Bks., Lawrence Stone, Nov. 14, 1974. Psychological gloss on Ariès. Brilliant critique of Eriksonian ego-psychology, pointing that W.s optimism ill-founded, for generativity is a fragile cultural artifact, not instinctive human response. So in reality, child. have often been neglected and abused. Criticizes Ariè's hist.l model for nostalgic, even reactionary Gemeinschaft-Gesellschaft Durkheimian view of change and for exagg. etc.
